No. 844

Office - Supreme Court,
FILED
MAY 26 1950
CHARLES ELMORE CROP
CLE

United States District Court

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

Equity No. 87-273

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff, against

LOEW'S INCORPORATED, WARNER BROS. PICTURES, INC., WARNER BROS. PICTURES DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION (formerly known as VITAGRAPH, INC.), WARNER BROS. CIRCUIT MANAGEMENT CORPORATION, TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX FILM CORPORATION, NATIONAL THEATRES CORPORATION, COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPORATION, SCREEN GEMS, INC., COLUMBIA PICTURES OF LOUISIANA, INC., UNIVERSAL CORPORATION, UNIVERSAL PICTURES COMPANY, INC., UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGES, INC., BIG U FILM EXCHANGE, INC., and UNITED ARTISTS CORPORATION, Defendants.

STATEMENT AS TO JURISDICTION (WITH OPINION AND DECREE)

JOHN W. DAVIS
J. ROBERT RUBIN
Attorneys for Defendant Loew's Incorporated
15 Broad Street
New York 5, N. Y.

POOR COPY

United States District Court

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff, —against— LOEW'S INCORPORATED, et al., Defendants.	Equity No. 87-273

STATEMENT AS TO THE JURISDICTION OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES ON APPEAL TO REVIEW THE JUDGMENT HEREIN

In compliance with Rule 12 of the Rules of the Supreme Court of the United States, as amended, Loew's Incorporated, the appellant in the above-entitled action, submits herewith its statement particularly disclosing the basis upon which the Supreme Court has jurisdiction upon appeal to review the Judgment, Decree and Final Order of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, entered in the Office of the Clerk of said Court on February 8, 1950.

A Petition for Appeal was filed in the District Court on April 4, 1950, and was allowed by order of the same date.

Jurisdiction

The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to review by direct appeal the Judgment entered in this cause is conferred by Section 2 of the Expediting Act of February 11, 1903, as amended (32 Stat. 823; 36 Stat. 1167; 58 Stat. 272; 62 Stat. 989; 15 U. S. C. Sec. 29), and Title 28, United States Code of June 25, 1948, Sec. 2101 (62 Stat. 961; 28 U. S. C. Sec. 2101.

The following decisions sustain the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to review the judgment on direct appeal in this case:

U. S. v. Yellow Cab Co., et al., 338 U. S. 338 (1949);

U. S. v. Women's Sportswear Assoc., 336 U. S. 460 (1949);

Ford Motor Co. v. U. S., 335 U. S. 303 (1948);

U. S. v. Paramount, et al., 334 U. S. 131 (1948);

U. S. v. Columbia Steel Co., et al., 334 U. S. 495 (1948);

U. S. v. Crescent Amusement Co., 323 U. S. 173 (1944);

Interstate Circuit v. U. S., 306 U. S. 208 (1939);

United States v. Reading Co., 226 U. S. 324 (1912).

Statutes Involved

The Sherman Act of July 2, 1890, as amended (26 Stat. 209; 50 Stat. 693; 15 U. S. C. Sections 1, 2 and 4), reading in part as follows:

> "§1. Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal: * * *
>
> §2. Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, * * *
>
> §4. The several district courts of the United States are invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of sections 1-7 of this title; * * *"

The Copyright Act of March 4, 1909, 35 Stat. 1075-1088 (17 U. S. C.), and particularly those portions reading as follows:

"§ 1. Any person entitled thereto, upon complying with the provisions of this title, shall have the exclusive right:

(a) To print, reprint, publish, copy and vend the copyrighted work;

(b) To translate the copyrighted work into other languages or dialects, or make any other version thereof, if it be a literary work; to dramatize it if it be a nondramatic work; to convert it into a novel or other nondramatic work if it be a drama; to arrange or adapt it if it be a musical work; to complete, execute, and finish it if it be a model or design for a work of art;

(c) To deliver or authorize the delivery of the copyrighted work in public for profit if it be a lecture, sermon, address, or similar production;

(d) To perform or represent the copyrighted work publicly if it be a drama or, if it be a dramatic work and not reproduced in copies for sale, to vend any manuscript or any record whatsoever thereof; to make or to procure the making of any transcription or record thereof by or from which, in whole or in part, it may in any manner or by any method be exhibited, performed, represented, produced, or reproduced; and to exhibit, perform, represent, produce, or reproduce it in any manner or by any method whatsoever;

* * * *

§ 4. The works for which copyright may be secured under this title shall include all the writings of an author.

§5. The application for registration shall specify to which of the following classes the work in which copyright is claimed belongs:

* * * *

(l) Motion-picture photoplays;

(m) Motion pictures other than photoplays."

The Issues and the Rulings Below

This action was instituted in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York against eight of the principal units in the domestic motion picture industry, five of which (Fox, Loew's, Paramount, RKO and Warner) were engaged in producing, distributing and exhibiting motion pictures, two of which (Columbia and Universal) were producers and distributors, and one of which (United Artists) was engaged only in distributing motion pictures.

Injunctive relief against certain trade practices existent in the distributing branch of the motion picture industry was demanded and divorcement of the exhibition activities from the production-distribution activities of the first five named defendants was also prayed.

The case was tried in 1945 by a special three-judge court appointed pursuant to the Expediting Act, 15 U. S. C. § 28, consisting of Augustus N. Hand, Circuit Judge; Henry W. Goddard and John Bright, District Judges.

On December 31, 1946, the District Court entered its judgment. In brief, it determined, among other things, that the eight defendants had violated the Sherman Act by conspiring with each other to establish a fixed system of runs, clearances and minimum theatre admission prices. The Court also found, however, that these illegalities and restraints were not the result of the defendants' ownership of theatres, but were trade practices existent in the distribution of motion pictures regardless of who owned the theatres. The District Court enjoined these practices and did not decree total divestiture. However, in addition to the prohibitive provisions of its judgment, the Court established a system of competitive bidding for pictures. (66 F. Supp. 323, 70 F. Supp. 53).

The plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court from that part of the District Court's judgment which established the competitive bidding system and from the District Court's failure to grant divorcement of production-distribution from exhibition of motion pictures.

POOR COPY

After the plaintiff appealed, Loew's appealed, assigning error to the District Court's findings and conclusions of illegalities in trade practices, and to its decision that the Court did not have power to continue an arbitration system for the motion picture industry which the District Court itself had found to be of value. Loew's however, did not appeal from the District Court's requirement that theatres bid competitively for pictures.

On May 3, 1948, the Supreme Court rendered its opinion (334 U. S. 131) affirming in part and reversing in part the decision of the District Court. The findings of the District Court with respect to trade practices and restraints of trade in the distribution field were affirmed, but that portion of the judgment of December 31, 1946, which created the competitive bidding system, was reversed.

The Supreme Court also set aside the findings of the District Court which had determined that the defendants had no monopoly of exhibition, and remanded the case to the District Court with instructions to make new findings of fact and to make an entirely fresh start on the whole of the problem.

On November 8, 1948, the defendant Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation with its associate companies entered into a consent decree with the plaintiff and since that date has not been a defendant in this case. Likewise, on March 3, 1949, the defendant Paramount Pictures, Inc. entered into a consent decree with the plaintiff and since that date has not been a defendant in this action. In each instance the defendant consented, among other things, to divorce its production-distribution activity from exhibition. In each decree, the resulting distribution company was not prohibited from engaging in the business of exhibition, and similarly, the resulting exhibition company was not prohibited from engaging in the business of distribution.

The hearings after remand with respect to the new findings of fact, conclusions of law and judgment proposed by the plaintiff commenced November 8, 1948. The District Court rendered its opinion July 25, 1949 (85 F. Supp. 881), and on February 8, 1950, filed its new findings of fact and conclusions of law and its judgment or "Final Decree" (p. 61 hereto).

In its judgment the Court directed that within six months from the entry thereof, each of the theatre-owning defendants should submit a plan for the ultimate separation of its distribution and production business from its exhibition business and that no defendant-distributor and no distributor company resulting from the divorcement should engage in the exhibition business, and no defendant exhibitor and no exhibitor company resulting from the divorcement should engage in the distribution business. (Exception was provided, however, for a distributor company resulting from divorcement to engage in exhibition, after Court approval first obtained, and vice versa with respect to an exhibition company resulting from divorcement.) (Judgment, Section IV, pars. 1 and 3, pp. 66, 67 hereto).

The District Court further directed that within one year from the entry of the judgment the defendants should file plans for the divestiture of individual theatres. (Judgment, Section IV, par. 2, p. 67 hereto).

It is from Section IV of the judgment of February 8, 1950, requiring, among other things, separation of its distribution and production business from its exhibition business, and from certain of the findings of fact and conclusions of law upon which this is based, that the defendant Loew's Incorporated appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States. It asserts that the District Court committed manifest error not only in making these findings of fact and conclusions of law and judgment, but in failing to follow the mandate of the Supreme Court of June 3, 1948.

The Questions Involved Are Substantial

Substantial questions are involved and are fully covered by the Assignment of Errors of the defendant Loew's

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

Incorporated. These questions were properly raised before the District Court, both on the trial after remand and on arguments before the Court relating to the formulation of findings of fact and conclusions of law and the judgment.

1.

In its opinion of May 3, 1948 (334 U. S. 131), the Supreme Court held that the vertical integration of producing, distributing and exhibiting motion pictures is not illegal per se and that "in the opinion of the majority the legality of vertical integration under the Sherman Act turns on (1) the purpose or intent with which it was conceived, or (2) the power which it creates and the attendant purpose or intent". (334 U. S. at 174).

As to the first point, i.e., the question of the purpose or intent with which the defendants' integration was conceived, the District Court found against the plaintiff. Said the District Court on this score (Opinion, p. 45 hereto):

> "We are not satisfied that the plaintiff has shown a calculated scheme to control the market in the conception of the defendants' vertical integration, rather than a purpose to obtain an outlet for their pictures and a supply of film for their theatres."

Since the District Court has found that the vertical integration was not conceived as "a calculated scheme to control the market", the only remaining basis within the mandate of the Supreme Court for separating production-distribution from exhibition was that the vertical integration of these activities created a power to exclude competition and that there was a purpose or intent to exercise it.*

---

*It should be noted that the question of divestiture of illegal fruits discussed at length in the Supreme Court's opinion of May 3, 1948 334 U. S. at 170-173) is not involved in this point.

At the hearings on remand the plaintiff did not offer evidence as to that portion of the Supreme Court's opinion of May 3, 1948 which directed inquiry into whether or not any of defendants' theatres were "illegal fruits" of the conspiracies previously found by

The Supreme Court in spelling out this test with regard to vertical integration said (334 U. S. at 174):

> "Second, a vertically integrated enterprise, like other aggregations of business units (United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 148 F. 2d 416), will constitute monopoly which, though unexercised, violates the Sherman Act provided a power to exclude competition is coupled with a purpose or intent to do so. As we pointed out in United States v. Griffith, ante p. 100, n. 10, size is itself an earmark of monopoly power. For size carries with it an opportunity for abuse. And the fact that the power created by size was utilized in the past to crush or prevent competition is potent evidence that the requisite purpose or intent attends the presence of monopoly power. See United States v. Swift & Co., 286 U. S. 106, 116; United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, supra, p. 430. Likewise bearing on the question whether monopoly power is created by the vertical integration, is the nature of the market to be served (United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, supra, p. 430), and the leverage on the market which the particular vertical integration creates or makes possible." (emphasis added)

Thus the Supreme Court held that to strike down a vertically integrated enterprise it must be shown that it is the integration itself which creates the monopoly power to exclude competition and that there is a purpose or intent to do so. The rationale of this requirement is manifest. For example, a vertically integrated enterprise which has many retail stores in a given area, but produces and supplies only a small portion of the merchandise sold by its stores, might well have monopoly power to exclude com-the District Court, nor did the plaintiff offer sufficient evidence to establish the existence of local exhibition monopolies.

---

The District Court in its opinion after remand expressly stated "The plaintiff has presented insufficient evidence to justify us in disestablishing particular theatres either on the theory of local monopolies or of illegal fruits, * * *." (Opinion, p. 56 hereto; emphasis added) peting retailers in the market concerned. That power, however, would in no sense be due to the company's vertical integration, but only to the great number of retail stores which it operates. Thus the mere existence or non-existence of monopoly power does not necessarily determine the legality of vertical integration. As the Supreme Court held, that turns on whether or not it is the vertical integration which creates the monopoly.

POOR COPY

The District Court nowhere made such a finding in the case at bar. The plaintiff specifically requested the District Court to make the following finding and the District Court refused to do so:

> "The vertical integration of the major defendants created a power to control the distribution and exhibition market of motion picture films, which was accompanied by an intent to exercise that power." (Plaintiff's proposed finding No. 147(a); emphasis added)

Since the District Court made no finding that it is the vertical integration of the major defendants which creates a power to exclude competition, and in fact refused so to do, and since the Supreme Court held that production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures is not illegal per se, a substantial question for review is presented whether the District Court did not violate the mandate of the Supreme Court in decreeing separation of production-distribution from exhibition.

2.

The Supreme Court in its opinion of May 3, 1948 was explicit in stating that in determining legality of vertical integration, the District Court should do so, not on an industry-wide basis, but on a basis of the enterprise in question, to determine whether its integration gives it power to exclude competition in the markets in which it operates. The Supreme Court said "A vertically integrated enterprise, like other aggregations of business units (United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 148 F. 2d 416), will constitute monopoly * * * provided a power to exclude competition is coupled with a purpose or intent to do so." The Supreme Court further pointed out that "bearing on the question whether monopoly is created by the vertical integration, is the nature of the market to be served (United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, supra, p. 430), and the leverage on the market which the particular vertical integration creates or makes possible." (334 U. S. at 174; emphasis added)

Thus the Supreme Court explicitly directed that the District Court should determine the legality of vertical integration in the case at bar on the basis of whether or not "the particular vertical integration" creates a power to exclude competition in the markets which it serves.

The mandate of the Supreme Court in this regard is specific. It is sound economically as well as legally. "Vertical integration", in so far as it has any meaning in commercial or legal parlance, refers to an aggregation of business units, each handling one stage of the processing of a product from raw material through to ultimate consumer. The legality of such an aggregation turns on the effect which the interconnection of these business units has upon competitors on the various levels at which each business unit functions. Obviously, in judging that effect, the size and position of the various units comprising the enterprise will be decisive. For example, an integrated company in the motion picture industry with 1395 theatres on the exhibition level, such as Paramount, would have far greater power in dealing with competitors both on the exhibition and the distribution level, than a company such as Loew's operating less than 1/10th that number of theatres, (131 theatres, none of which involved any "closed towns" or even any closed first-run situations). It is essential, therefore, in determining the legality of vertical integration to do so in terms of "the particular integration" or "enterprise", as the mandate of the Supreme Court directs.

The Supreme Court in United States v. Columbia Steel Company, et al., 334 U. S. 495, again emphasized that legality of vertical integration is to be determined on the basis of a particular enterprise. At page 524, the Supreme Court said:

> "In United States v. Paramount Pictures, 334 U. S. 131, we were presented with a situation in which the government charged that vertical integration was illegal under the Sherman Act. We held that control by the major producer-distributors over nearly three-quarters of the first-run theaters in cities with population over 100,000 was not of itself illegal, and we remanded the case to the district court for further findings. In outlining the factors which we considered to be significant in determining the legality of vertical integration, we emphasized the importance of characterizing the nature of the market to be served, and the leverage on the market which the particular vertical integration creates or makes possible." (emphasis added)

The District Court in the case at bar did not consider the "vertically integrated enterprise"—Loew's Incorporated—in light of the tests prescribed by the mandate of the Supreme Court (i.e. Loew's power by reason of its integration to exclude competition in exhibition and distribution). Instead the District Court attempted to deal with legality of vertical integration on an industry-wide basis.

A substantial question for review is therefore presented whether the District Court did not err in determining legality of vertical integration on an industry-wide rather than a particular enterprise basis.

3.

Quite apart from its failure to follow the mandate of the Supreme Court in determining the legality of vertical integration on the basis of a particular enterprise, the District Court committed a separate and fundamental error in wholly ignoring the type of consideration to be given vertical integration as set forth in the mandate of the Supreme Court and amplified in its subsequent opinion in United States v. Columbia Steel Company, et al., 334 U. S. 495.

In the Columbia Steel case, the Supreme Court applied the tests as to the legality of vertical integration which it had laid down in United States v. Paramount. In examining the legality of the acquisition by United States Steel Corporation of the assets of Consolidated Steel Corporation, the Court analyzed and measured the extent of the market which would be preempted as a result of the integration of these two companies. Thus, the Supreme Court stated, pp. 526-7:

> "Applying the standards laid down in the Paramount case, we conclude that the so-called vertical integration resulting from the acquisition of Consolidated does not unreasonably restrict the opportunities of the competitor producers of rolled steel to market their product. We accept as the relevant competitive market the total demand for rolled steel products in the eleven-state area; over the past ten years Consolidated has accounted for only 3% of that demand, and if expectations as to the development of the western steel industry are realized Consolidated's proportion may be expected to be lower than that figure in the future." (emphasis added)

The decision in the Columbia Steel Company case required that the District Court in the case at bar examine the effect of vertical integration on the "relevant competitive markets". This meant, so far as Loew's is concerned, analyzing the effect of its integration upon competing distributors and exhibitors.

Loew's integration (i.e. the showing of Loew's pictures in Loew's theatres) excludes competing distributors from less than 3.2% of the distribution market, i.e. the available screen time in all theatres of the United States. In other words, the use of Loew's pictures in Loew's theatres excludes competing distributors of pictures from less than 3.2% of available screen time. This low percentage is due, of course, to the very limited number of theatres operated by Loew's, or to put it another way, to the very limited amount of screen time assured to Loew's by its integration.

With respect to the exclusionary effect of Loew's integration on competing exhibitors, it should also be noted that in the relatively few localities where Loew's operates theatres, the access which the Loew's theatres have to the first-run of Loew's pictures, by reason of its integration, excludes competing exhibitors in those localities (and only those localities) from less than 10% of the available first-run pictures. In other words, since Loew's pictures represent but 10% of all available product, 90% is available to competing exhibitors in such localities. In all places in the country where Loew's does not operate, Loew's integration has no effect whatever upon exhibitors in those localities. Thus since Loew's operates in only forty-two localities in the United States, the exhibitors in the other thousands of cities and towns are completely unaffected by Loew's integration.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

The absence of any monopoly power vis-a-vis competing exhibitors and distributors is established by more than these percentage figures.

For example, in Louisville, Kentucky, Loew's operates the only affiliated theatre in the city. It is inconceivable that Loew's by reason of that theatre has the power to exclude competing theatres from the first-run product of the major distributors, or vice versa, has the power to exclude competing distributors from the opportunity of licensing their product in that market. The defendant Loew's established at the trial, after remand, that all four of the other major defendants regularly licensed their products first-run in Louisville to independent theatres to the exclusion of Loew's. Moreover, the fact that two independent exhibitors with three first-run theatres have operated for over 20 years side by side with Loew's theatre is actual proof of the lack of exclusionary effect of Loew's integration. (Cf. Fifth & Walnut Inc. v. Loew's Inc., 76 F. Supp. 64 (S. D. N. Y. 1948), aff'd. 176 F. 2d 587 (1949), cert. denied, 338 U. S. 894, 940 (1949).)

The same is true in many other localities where Loew's operates theatres. Indeed, the District Court found at the first trial, and did not alter after the remand, that:

> "131. In 21 of the 36 out of the 92 cities where Loew's operates theatres none of the other four pro> ducer-exhibitors licensed its features in the 1943-44 season for first-run exhibition in a Loew's theatre, to the extent of more than three features, the Loew's theatres' first-run exhibition being otherwise limited to its own features and those of non-theatre-owning producers."

The District Court in the case at bar did not even mention the decision of the Supreme Court in United States v. Columbia Steel Company, et al. It wholly disregarded the standards laid down therein and in the Supreme Court's opinion of May 3, 1948 in the case at bar. Instead, it dealt with "vertical integration" only in such vague phrases as, "the strategic advantages of vertical integration", and conspiracy "aided" or "induced" by vertical integration.

In failing to apply the standards prescribed by the Supreme Court and in failing to consider the "relevant competitive markets" in determining the legality of vertical integration, the District Court's decision presents a substantial question for review.

4.

In dealing with the existence or non-existence of monopoly power a consideration of primary importance is whether or not the determination is to be made on a basis of existing conditions or as of the past.

In dealing with the subject of "illegal fruits", i.e. theatres acquired through illegal practices, very obviously past events determine the question, but all consideration of that issue was eliminated when the District Court said "the plaintiff has not introduced evidence to support any claim of divestiture of 'illegal fruits' * * *." (Opinion, p. 30 hereto)

In determining whether a power to exclude competitors exists, the consideration must necessarily be of the present. It is a recognized principle of equity, that it speaks as of the present. In Champion Spark Plug Co. v. Reich, 121 Fed. 2d 769 at 772 (C. C. A. 8th, 1941) the court said:

POOR COPY
BLEED THROUGH

> "Plaintiff's claim that it is entitled to a permanent injunction against the first group of practices referred to above is without merit. That contention ignores the rule that a court of equity is not restricted to an adjustment of the rights of the parties as they existed when suit was brought, but will give relief appropriate to events occurring pending the suit. 21 C. J. 137, 'Equity acts in the present tense', and molds its 'decree to actualities not history.' Continental Securities Co v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., D. C. N. Y., 207 F. 467, 471 affirmed, 2 Cir., 221 F. 44; 32 C. J. 76, § 63." (emphasis added)

This principle was recognized in U. S. v. Aluminum Company of America, 148 F. 2d 416, 446 (1945, decision by C. C. A. 2d in lieu of the Supreme Court). After pointing out "dissolution is not a penalty but a remedy; * * *", the Court held that even though "Alcoa" had had a monopoly status in 1941, the Court would not decree dissolution in 1945 for the reason that the remedy should be determined under conditions existing at the time of the decree.

The Supreme Court adopted this principle in the case at bar when it defined monopoly in its opinion of May 3, 1948 as "* * * the existence of power 'to exclude [etc.]'" (334 U. S. 173; emphasis added)

The District Court in the case at bar disregarded present conditions in determining the existence or non-existence of monopoly power in one very important respect. Its findings after remand which bear date of February 8, 1950, provide that "unless otherwise stated these findings show the situation in 1945". So far as defendants' theatre ownerships were concerned, the District Court's decision after remand spoke as of 1945, and as to distribution, spoke as of 1943-44. While the District Court held that it considered later evidence with respect to conditions at those earlier periods, it failed to give any consideration to the fact that two of the original defendants, Paramount and RKO entered into consent decrees and were no longer defendants substantially prior to the submission of the case after remand.

As a result of these consent decrees vast numbers of theatres heretofore classified as "affiliated" (i.e. theatres owned by one of the five original major defendants) are no longer affiliated. Presumably standards of competition compatible with the Sherman Act have been established with respect to these two former defendants. Consequently, in determining the existence or non-existence of monopoly power on the part of the defendants, it is of first importance that now there are only one-half as many "affiliated" theatres as formerly existed.

Thus these findings after remand as to licensing and theatre conditions in 1943-44 and 1945 are as invalid as to the present existence of monopoly power as were the monopoly findings of 1941 in the Alcoa case when it was before the Court in 1945.

Aside from its effect on consideration of monopoly power, this great reduction of "affiliated" theatres also has great bearing on the question of interdependence of one defendant on another. The District Court in its second opinion felt that lack of competition had been induced by "the reliance of the defendants on each other in obtaining pictures for use in their various theatres." (Opinion, p. 44 hereto). While this statement of interdependence does not and never has had any application to the defendant Loew's,* it is clear that the consent decrees of Paramount and RKO have destroyed any possible element of interdependence with these defendants.

The District Court in refusing to determine the existence or non-existence of monopoly power on the basis of present conditions committed error presenting a substantial question for review.

---

*After the first trial the District Court made the following finding with respect to Loew's which stands unreversed:

> "The [Loew's] first-run theatres, which are engaged to a large extent in exhibiting Loew's own product, Metro pictures, serve as 'show cases' for those pictures in the areas where the theatres are located." (Finding 120; emphasis added)

See also the District Court's unreversed findings 131-135 incl., 140, and 149.

POOR COPY

5.

After the first trial the District Court found that the trade practices which it held to have violated the Sherman Act were in no way related to the defendants' ownership of theatres. Thus, the District Court then found:

> "154. The illegalities and restraints herein found are not in the ownership of many or most of the best theatres by the producer-distributors, but in admission price-fixing, non-competitive granting of runs and clearances, unreasonable clearances, formula deals, master agreements, franchises, block-booking, pooling agreements, and certain discriminations among licensees between defendants and independents. These practices, if employed in the future, in favor of powerful independents would effect all of the undesirable results that have existed when the five exhibitor defendants and their subsidiaries have owned or controlled numerous theatres in which the defendants' pictures have been exhibited."
>
> "156. Total divestiture would not remedy the price-fixing, systems of clearance, formula deals, master agreements and franchises, block-booking, pooling agreements, and the other practices which have been found unreasonably to restrict competition." (emphasis added)

On remand, the District Court vacated the foregoing findings and found instead:

> "43(a). The theatre holdings of the major defendants have played a vital part in effecting violations of the Sherman Anti-trust Act."
>
> "147(b). There is close relationship between the vertical integrations and the illegal practices. The vertical integrations were a means of carrying out the restraints and conspiracies."

In making this complete about face as to facts, the District Court did not purport to do so on the basis of any new evidence, but offered the following explanation:

> "Although we previously held in Finding No. 154 that the illegalities and restraints were not in the ownership of theatres by the major defendants but in their unlawful practices, this finding was made because of our view that the competitive bidding system, when coupled with injunctions, would terminate the illegalities, and if such illegalities were terminated, the theatre ownerships alone would not be unlawful. This interpretation of our finding is justified by our former conclusion that divestiture should not be tried unless the competitive bidding system was found wanting. In other words, if theatre ownership were regarded as under no circumstances related to violations of the Sherman Act, divestiture could not be a proper remedy and would not have been suggested as a possible alternative in our former opinion". (Opinion, p. 31 hereto; emphasis added)

Although the Supreme Court in its opinion of May 3, 1948 set aside the District Court's former findings on divestiture (which might include those to the effect that the illegalities found, i.e. fixed admission prices, franchises, block-booking, etc., were not related to theatre ownership) it did so, not because those findings were not supported by the evidence but in order that the District Court might make new findings which would reflect a consideration by the District Court of evidence on the criteria set forth by the Supreme Court for determining the legality of vertical integration. The Supreme Court did not hold that the facts found were incorrect, nor did it direct that contrary findings be made. Yet that is precisely what the District Court has done, and it has done so, not on the basis of new evidence contradicting the former facts, but by a disingenuous repudiation of the former facts on the ground that even though they related to past conditions, the Court had in mind possible future relief (i.e. competitive bidding) which has now been rejected.

The importance of this complete volte face lies in the fact that upon it rests in large measure the District Court's decision that the defendants' vertical integrations are illegal.

The fundamental error of the District Court in this entire decision comes from its attempt to divine the ultimate conclusions desired by the Supreme Court, and to render a decision accordingly, rather than to carry out the instructions of that Court as to how the legality of the defendants' theatre ownerships should be determined. By proceeding in this manner, the District Court was obliged to make arbitrary alterations in its findings of fact to suit its conclusion previously reached rather than to make the investigations and findings so clearly directed by the mandate of the Supreme Court.

The District Court in following its arbitrary procedure of reversing former findings of fact without new evidence to justify the change, committed reversible error presenting a substantial question for review.

6.

The District Court erroneously concluded on the remand that in the absence of competitive bidding, total divestiture was "the only adequate means of terminating the conspiracy and preventing any resurgence of monopoly power on the part of the remaining defendants". (Opinion p. 50 hereto). This conclusion by the District Court that the only alternative to competitive bidding was a complete divorcement of the defendants' exhibition activity from production-distribution was erroneous.

Since vertical integration of production-distribution and exhibition is legal per se, then it must follow, if divestiture of individual theatres is to proceed, that a cutting down of the extent of a vertically integrated company's activity in the exhibition field could bring it within the protection of this mandate of the Supreme Court.

The District Court has directed that the defendants submit plans for divestiture of individual theatres within a period of a year from the date of its judgment (Section IV, par. 2, p. 67 hereto). If this provision remains, these plans, which must provide for divestiture of theatre interests believed "to be adequate to satisfy the requirements of the Supreme Court decision herein with respect to such divestiture" will place the defendants in a position where their vertical integrations in every respect meet the "power" tests laid down by the Supreme Court in this and the Columbia Steel cases. Under such circumstances, it should, as a matter of law, be possible for the defendants to continue in their businesses of producing, distributing and exhibiting motion pictures.

The plaintiff recognized this principle in the decree which it proposed at the commencement of the proceedings after remand. There it provided:

> "At any time after three years from the entry of this judgment any defendant which has submitted a plan pursuant to paragraph (1) of Section IV of this judgment may petition the court to suspend the effective date of such plan or the taking of any steps to effectuate it upon the ground that actual divestiture of theatre interests during such period has made such plan unnecessary, in whole or in part, to provide adequate competition in the distribution and exhibition of films. Upon the filing, in good faith, of such a petition, an appropriate order suspending execution of the plan shall issue as of course and be in effect until the court shall have heard and determined the merits of the petition. The court may thereafter enter an order revoking, modifying, or affirming said plan, in whole or in part, or substituting such other relief as may be warranted by its findings as to the competitive conditions then prevailing in the industry." (emphasis added)

By this proposed decree the plaintiff left open to a defendant the possibility of so reducing its activity in the exhibition field as to make it possible for it to continue as a vertically integrated enterprise.

The defendant Loew's urged on the District Court that it should use this provision in its final decree because it thereby would make it possible for Loew's divestiture of individual theatres to bring its vertical integration to such a position that even when viewed collectively with other defendants any power to exclude would be completely eliminated.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

In refusing to adopt the plaintiff's initial proposal and in eliminating all possibility of an enterprise, presently integrated, to bring itself within the law, the District Court ignored not only the Supreme Court's holding of legality per se, but denied to the defendant both now and in the future the right to exercise privileges expressly conferred by the Copyright Act. This holding constituted error presenting a substantial question for review.

The foregoing are among the substantial questions raised by this appeal. Other substantial questions are likewise raised in the Assignment of Errors herewith submitted and the defendant reserves the right to urge them upon its appeal.

The defendant is of the belief that all questions here raised, as well as others raised by the Assignment of Errors, but not specifically referred to herein, are substantial, and respectfully petitions the Supreme Court to pass on them after plenary hearing.

Dated: April 4, 1950.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN W. DAVIS
J. ROBERT RUBIN
Attorneys for Defendant Loew's Incorporated
15 Broad Street
New York 5, N. Y.

POOR COPY

United States District Court

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff, against LOEW'S INCORPORATED, WARNER BROS. PICTURES, INC., WARNER BROS. PICTURES DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION (formerly known as VITAGRAPH, INC.), WARNER BROS. CIRCUIT MANAGEMENT CORPORATION, TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX FILM CORPORATION, NATIONAL THEATRES CORPORATION, COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPORATION, SCREEN GEMS, INC., COLUMBIA PICTURES OF LOUISIANA, INC., UNIVERSAL CORPORATION, UNIVERSAL PICTURES COMPANY, INC., UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGES, INC., BIG U FILM EXCHANGE, INC., and UNITED ARTISTS CORPORATION, Defendants.	Equity No. 87-273

OPINION OF THE DISTRICT COURT AFTER REMAND

Before:

AUGUSTUS N. HAND, Circuit Judge,

HENRY W. GODDARD and ALFRED C. COXE, District Judges.

Herbert A. Bergson, Assistant Attorney General; Robert L. Wright and J. Francis Hayden, Special Assistants to the Attorney General; George H. Davis, Jr., and Harold Lasser, Special Attorneys, for United States of America.

Davis Polk Wardwell Sunderland & Kiendl; J. Robert Rubin, Attorneys for Defendant Loew's Inc.; John W. Davis, J. Robert Rubin, S. Hazard Gillespie, Jr., and Benjamin Melniker, Counsel.

Joseph M. Proskauer and Robert W. Perkins, Attorneys for the Warner defendants; Joseph M. Proskauer, Robert W. Perkins, J. Alvin Van Bergh, Howard Levinson, and Harold Berkowitz, Counsel.

James F. Byrnes; Dwight Harris Koegel & Caskey, Attorneys for Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and National Theatres Corporation, Defendants; James F. Byrnes, Otto E. Koegel, John F. Caskey, and Frederick W. R. Pride, Counsel.

Schwartz & Frohlich, Attorneys for Defendant Columbia; Louis D. Frohlich and Everett A. Frohlich, Counsel.

Charles D. Prutzman, Attorney for the Universal Defendants; Cyril S. Landau, Counsel.

O'Brien, Driscoll & Raftery, Attorneys for the Defendant United Artists Corporation; Edward C. Raftery and George A. Raftery, Counsel.

AUGUSTUS N. HAND, Circuit Judge:

This case comes before us after a decision by the Supreme Court affirming in part and reversing in part our decree and findings of December 31, 1946, 70 F. Supp. 53, United States v. Paramount Pictures, Inc., 334 U. S. 131. Under our findings of fact, we held that there had been violations of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act which were summarized in the conclusions of law as follows:

> "7. The defendants Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Paramount Film Distributing Corporation; Loew's, Incorporated; Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.; Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation; RKO Proctor Corporation; RKO Midwest Corporation; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc.; Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corporation;

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; National Theatres Corporation; Columbia Pictures Corporation; Columbia Pictures of Louisiana, Inc.; Universal Corporation; Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; Big U Film Exchange, Inc.; and United Artists Corporation have unreasonably restrained trade and commerce in the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures and attempted to monopolize such trade and commerce, * * * in violation of the Sherman Act by:

"(a) Acquiescing in the establishment of a price fixing system by conspiring with one another to maintain theatre admission prices;

"(b) Conspiring with each other to maintain a nation-wide system of runs and clearances which is substantially uniform in each local competitive area.

"8. The distributor defendants Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Paramount Film Distributing Corporation; Loew's, Incorporated; Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation; RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc.; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; Columbia Pictures Corporation; Columbia Pictures of Louisiana, Inc.; Universal Corporation; Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; Big U Film Exchange, Inc.; and United Artists Corporation, have unreasonably restrained trade and commerce in the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures and attempted to monopolize such trade and commerce,  in violation of the Sherman Act by:

"(a) Conspiring with each other to maintain a nation-wide system of fixed minimum motion picture theatre admission prices;

"(b) Agreeing individually with their respective licensees to fix minimum motion picture theatre admission prices;

"(c) Conspiring with each other to maintain a nation-wide system of runs and clearances which is substantially uniform as to each local competitive area;

"(d) Agreeing individually with their respective licensees to grant discriminatory license privileges to theatres affiliated with other defendants and with large circuits as found in finding No. 110 above;

"(e) Agreeing individually with such licensees to grant unreasonable clearance against theatres operated by their competitors;

"(f) Making master agreements and franchises with such licensees;

"(g) Individually conditioning the offer of a license for one or more copyrighted films upon the acceptance by the licensee of one or more other copyrighted films, except in the case of the United Artists Corporation;

"(h) The defendants Paramount and RKO making formula deals.

"(9) The exhibitor-defendants, Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Loew's, Incorporated; Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation; Keith-Albee Orpheum Corporation; RKO Proctor Corporation; RKO Midwest Corporation; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corporation; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; and National Theatres Corporation have unreasonably restrained trade and commerce in the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures * * * in violation of the Sherman Act by:

"(a) Jointly operating motion picture theatres with each other and with independents through operating agreements or profit-sharing leases;

"(b) Jointly owning motion picture theatres with each other and with independents through stock interests in theatre buildings;

"(c) Conspiring with each other and with the distributor-defendants to fix substantially uniform minimum motion pictures theatre admission prices, runs, and clearances;

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

> "(d) Conspiring with the distributor-defendants to discriminate against independent competitors in fixing minimum admission price, run, clearance, and other license terms."

As a remedy for the violations which we have summarized above, we held that a system of competitive bidding for film licenses should be introduced, saying in Finding 85 that:

> "Competition can be introduced into the present system of fixed admission prices, clearances, and runs, by requiring a defendant-distributor when licensing its features to grant the license for each run at a reasonable clearance (if clearance is involved) to the highest bidder, if such bidder is responsible and has a theatre of a size, location, and equipment adequate to yield a reasonable return to the licensor. In other words, if two theaters are bidding and are fairly comparable, the one offering the best terms shall receive the license. Thus, price fixing among the licensors or between a licensor and its licensees as well as the non-competitive clearance system may be terminated."

We also said in Finding 111 that the granting of discriminatory license privileges would be impossible under such a system of competitive bidding as we have mentioned. In addition to providing a system of competitive bidding, we enjoined the unlawful practices above referred to, other than discrimination in granting licenses, which was sufficiently obviated by the provisions for competitive bidding.

In connection with the foregoing, we denied the application of the plaintiff to divest the major defendants of their theatres on the ground that such a remedy was too harsh and that the system of competitive bidding when coupled with the injunctive relief against the practices we found to be unlawful was adequate relief, at least until the efficiency of that system had been tried and found wanting. We held that the root of the lack of competition lay not in the ownership of many or most of the best theatres, but in the illegal practices of the defendants, which we believed would be obviated by the remedies we proposed. We examined the theatre holdings of the major defendants, found that they aggregated only about 17% of all theatres in the United States, and held that these defendants by such theatre holdings alone did not collectively or individually have a monopoly of exhibition. While we did not find in express terms that there was no monopoly in first-run exhibition, we did review the statistics as to the first-run ownership in the 92 largest cities and stated in our opinion of June 11, 1946, that the defendants were not to be viewed collectively in determining the question of monopoly. See 66 F. Supp. 323, 354. We also found no substantial proof that any of the corporate defendants was organized or had been maintained for the purpose of achieving a national monopoly. Finding No. 152. Likewise, even as to localities where one defendant owned all first-run theatres, we found no sufficient proof of purpose to create a monopoly or that the total ownership in such places had not rather arisen from the inertness of competitors, their lack of financial ability to build comparable theatres, or from the preference of the public for the best equipped theatres. Finding No. 153.

In its opinion remanding the case for further consideration in certain respects, the Supreme Court affirmed our findings as to price-fixing, runs, clearances, and discriminatory licenses and other practices which we found to be unlawful, with certain minor reservations as to the unlawfulness of joint interests and franchises. It eliminated, however, the provisions of our decree for competitive bidding "so that a more effective decree may be fashioned," adding by way of caution that : "The competitive bidding system was perhaps the central arch of the decree designed by the District Court. Its elimination may affect the cases in ways other than those which we expressly mention. Hence on remand of the cases the freedom of the District Court to reconsider the adequacy of decree is not limited to those parts we have specifically indicated." [334 U. S. at p. 166]. It directed our further consideration of monopoly, divestiture and expansion of theatre holdings, giving as one reason the following: "As we have seen, the District Court considered competitive bidding as an alternative to divestiture in the sense that it concluded that further consideration of divestiture should not be had until competitive bidding had been tried and found wanting. Since we eliminate from the decree the provisions for competitive bidding, it is necessary to set aside the findings on divestiture so that a new start on this phase of the cases may be made on their remand." [334 U. S. at p. 175].

As further reasons for directing a reconsideration of the above issues, we were asked to determine whether the vertical integration of the major defendants, which was held not to be unlawful per se, was conceived with an intent to monopolize or was of such a character as to confer a known monopoly power. If the power be established, a specific intent to monopolize need not be shown. As was said by Justice Douglas in United States v. Griffith, 334 U. S. 100, 105, and referred to in United States v. Paramount, 334 U. S. 131, 173:

> "It is, however, not always necessary to find a specific intent to restrain trade or to build a monopoly in order to find that the anti-trust laws have been violated. It is sufficient that a restraint of trade or monopoly results as the consequence of a defendant's conduct or business arrangements. United States v. Patten, 226 U. S. 525, 543; United States v. Masonite Corp., 316 U. S. 265, 275. To require a greater showing would cripple the Act. As stated in United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 148 F. 2d 416, 432, 'no monopolist monopolizes unconscious of what he is doing.' Specific intent in the sense in which the common law used the term is necessary only where the acts fall short of the results condemned by the Act."

In dealing with the effect of vertical integration upon monopoly, the opinion of the Supreme Court directs us to consider more explicitly than we did in our original opinion whether monopoly exists as to first-run theatres throughout the nation, in the 92 largest cities, and in local situations.

It also directs us to determine whether there has been a geographic distribution of theatre ownership among the major defendants. The opinion also says:

> "It is clear, so far as the five majors are concerned, that the aim of the conspiracy was exclusionary, i.e. it was designed to strengthen their hold on the exhibition field. In other words, the conspiracy had monopoly in exhibition for one of its goals, as the District Court held. Price, clearance, and run are interdependent. The clearance and run provisions of the licenses fixed the relative playing positions of all theatres in a certain area; the minimum price provisions were based on playing position—the first-run theatres being required to charge the highest prices, the second-run theatres the next highest, and so on. As the District Court found, 'In effect, the distributor, by the fixing of minimum admission prices, attempts to give the prior-run exhibitors as near a monopoly of the patronage as possible.'
>
> "It is, therefore, not enough in determining the need for divestiture to conclude with the District Court that none of the defendants was organized or has been maintained for the purpose of achieving a 'national monopoly,' nor that the five majors through their present theatre holdings 'alone' do not and cannot collectively or individually have a monopoly of exhibition. For when the starting point is a conspiracy to effect a monopoly through restraints of trade, it is relevant to determine what the results of the conspiracy were even if they fell short of monopoly." [334 U. S. at pp. 170-171].

We were also directed to determine whether any "illegal fruits" were acquired or maintained by the defendants as results of unlawful conspiracies and to divest any such fruits, irrespective of whether monopoly had in fact been achieved. The plaintiff has not introduced evidence to support any claim of divestitute of "illegal fruits" and expressly reserves the presentation of such an issue for the future.

Because of the view of the Supreme Court as to matters to be specially considered on the remand as well as its view regarding other matters which it left open for consideration by this court, it set aside our findings on monopoly and divestiture and our provisions prohibiting further theatre expansion and our provisions for competitive bidding, in order that "the District Court should be allowed to make an entirely fresh start on the whole of the problem."

Although we previously held in Finding No. 154 that the illegalities and restraints were not in the ownership of theatres by the major defendants but in their unlawful practices, this finding was made because of our view that the competitive bidding system, when coupled with injunctions, would terminate the illegalities, and if such illegalities were terminated, the theatre ownerships alone would not be unlawful. This interpretation of our finding is justified by our former conclusion that divestiture should not be tried unless the competitive bidding system was found wanting. In other words, if theatre ownership were regarded as under no circumstances related to violations of the Sherman Act, divestiture could not be a proper remedy and would not have been suggested as a possible alternative in our former opinion.

Similarly, our Findings 152 and 153 that none of the defendants had been organized or maintained to achieve a national monopoly in production, distribution, or exhibition, or a local monopoly in first-run theatre ownership should be read in the light of the remedy we adopted. The provisions for competitive bidding were thought to have eliminated the conspiracies which had theretofore existed among the defendants in their capacities both as distributors and exhibitors and between defendants and independents, in which the defendants had cooperated and aided one another through certain illegal practices. We accordingly treated the defendants as no longer able to engage in illegal practices and the public sufficiently safeguarded by the requirement of competitive bidding and the injunctions against such practices. These safeguards we thought applied to the national market as well as to local situations. Our conclusion of law that the defendants had attempted to monopolize was correct as to their prior acts, unaffected by our decree. And so the Supreme Court understood us to mean when it said: "In other words, the conspiracy had monopoly in exhibition for one of its goals, as the District Court held." [334 U. S. at p. 170]. With the elimination of competitive bidding, as we shall see from our future discussion, our Findings numbered 152 and 153 would not be justified, and should be vacated.

A review of the illegalities which we, and the Supreme Court as well, have found to exist, in addition to a consideration of geographical distribution and a very general absence of competition between the major defendants, convinces us that in the absence of a system of competitive bidding, the theatre holdings of the major defendants have played a vital part in effecting violations of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

We have held that all of the defendants fixed substantially the same price for each theatre in which they licensed their films. This system was general and affected most of the theatres in the United States. We likewise held that the system restricted competition between the theatres of the major defendants and those of independents. The system also plainly restricted competition between the theatres of the major defendants in those areas where such theatres were in competition with one another, since the minimum price to be charged by any theatre licensee was fixed and the licensee was prevented from competing in the business of exhibition by lowering his price. That these restrictions on competition were one of the primary objectives of the price-fixing conspiracy was noted in our former opinion, where we said that:

> "* * * all of the five major defendants had a definite interest in keeping up prices in any given territory in which they owned theatres, and this interest they were safeguarding by fixing minimum prices in their licenses when distributing their films to independent exhibitors in those areas. Even if the licenses were at a flat rate, a failure to require their licensees to maintain fixed prices would leave them free by lowering the current charge to decrease through competition the income in the licensors' own theatres in the neighborhood." [66 F. Supp. 335-6].

In discussing the foregoing practices, Mr. Justice Douglas said in his opinion:

> "The District Court found that two price-fixing conspiracies existed—a horizontal one between all the defendants; a vertical one between each distributor-defendant and its licensees. The latter was based on express agreements and was plainly established. The former was inferred from the pattern of price-fixing disclosed in the record. We think there was adequate foundation for it too. It is not necessary to find an express agreement in order to find a conspiracy. It is enough that a concert of action is contemplated and that the defendants conformed to the arrangement. Interstate Circuit v. United States, 306 U. S. 226-227; United States v. Masonite Corp., 316 U. S. 265, 275. That was shown here." [334 U. S. at p. 142].

It seems obvious from the foregoing that complete freedom from price competition among theatre holders could only be obtained if prices were fixed by all distributors, and such a result was substantially obtained. Consequently, the system of theatre licensing had a vital and all-pervasive effect in restricting competition for theatre patronage.

In our Finding 72 we held that: "The differentials in admission price set by a distributor in licensing a particular feature in theatres exhibiting on different runs in the same competitive area are calculated to encourage as many patrons as possible to see the picture in the prior-run theatres" and thus the distributor "attempts to give the prior-run exhibitors as near a monopoly of the patronage as possible." This policy not only benefited the distributors in securing to them a maximum rental income from their films, but also benefited the major defendants as exhibitors, since they were by far the largest owners of first-run theatres in the country.

The fixed system of runs and clearances which we found involved a cooperative arrangement among the defendants, was also designed to protect their theatre holdings and safeguard the revenue therefrom. Like the system of fixed prices, it could only succeed in eliminating competition if the defendants generally cooperated in maintaining it, as we have held they did. The major defendants' predominant position in first-run theatre holdings was strongly protected by a fixed system of clearances and runs. As we said in our former opinion:

> "The evidence we have referred to shows that both independent distributors and exhibitors when attempting to bargain with the defendants have been met by a fixed scale of clearances, runs, and admission prices to which they have been obliged to conform if they wished to get their pictures shown upon satisfactory runs or were to compete in exhibition either with the defendants' theatres or with theatres to which the latter have licensed their pictures. Under the circumstances disclosed in the record there has been no fair chance for either the present or any future licensees to change a situation sanctioned by such effective control and general acquiescence as have obtained." [66 F. Supp. at p. 346].

Our view was confirmed by Mr. Justice Douglas as follows:

> "Clearances have been used along with price fixing to suppress competition with the theatres of the exhibitor defendants and with other favored exhibitors." [334 U. S. 131, 148].

While we pointed out in our former opinion that there was discrimination in clearance and run by distributors and theatre holders in particular instances, such as Goldman Theatres v. Loew's, 150 F. 2d 738 (C. A. 3), and Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., 150 F. 2d 877 (C. A. 7), reversed on other grounds, 327 U. S. 251, we concluded that we could not say upon the facts before us that this discrimination was general. Nevertheless, as already stated, we held that the defendants had set up a system of fixed runs and clearances which prevented any effective competition by outsiders. This system, in the absence of competitive bidding which has now been rejected, gave the defendants a practical control over the run and clearance status of any given theatre and irrespective of the extent of local discriminations violated the Sherman Act. It involved discrimination against persons applying for licenses and seeking runs and clearances for their theatres, because they had no reasonable chance to improve their status by building or improving theatres while the major defendants possessed superior advantages. Therefore, though the evidence was insufficient to convince us that there was discrimination in negotiation for clearances and runs theatre by theatre, because it was well-nigh impossible to establish that a particular clearance or run was not refused because of the inadequacy of the applicant's theatre, the system of clearances and runs was such as to make competition against the defendants practically impossible.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

As we have held, the licensing agreements in use by the defendants discriminated against small independents in favor of the larger circuits of affiliated and unaffiliated theatres. This discrimination was effected through formula deals and certain privileges frequently granted to large circuits in franchises and master agreements. They not only showed discrimination against small theatre owners, but in many instances also showed cooperation among the major defendants in their respective capacities as distributors and exhibitors. The minor defendants as distributors acceded to and cooperated with these restrictions, which excluded small independents.

Formula deals and certain master agreements, both of which involved licenses to more than one theatre, and frequently to affiliated or large independent circuits, permitted the exhibitor to allocate film rental and playing time and thus precluded other theatre owners from the opportunity of competing for films theatre by theatre. While the Supreme Court has said that franchises are not necessarily objectionable per se, the defendants in various instances coupled their franchises with contract provisions which were not included in the standard forms of contract under which small independents were licensed. These provisions, which at times conferred great competitive advantages upon those receiving them, were:

"Suspending the terms of a given contract, if a circuit theatre remains closed for more than eight weeks, and reinstating it without liability upon reopening; allowing large privileges in the selection and elimination of films; allowing deductions in film rentals if double bills are played; granting move-overs and extended runs; granting road show privileges; allowing overage and underage; granting unlimited playing time; excluding foreign pictures and those of independent producers; granting rights to question the classification of features for rental purposes." [Finding 110].

We have been instructed by the Supreme Court to consider the question of geographical distribution of theatres among the five major defendants. In dealing with this subject, we do not take into account the presence or absence of independent theatres in the areas dealt with. We have examined the defendants' theatre holdings and find that in cities of less than 100,000 in population, there is no doubt that Paramount, Warner, Fox and RKO owned or operated theatres either in largely separate market areas or in pools, without more than trifling competition among themselves or with Loew's. In cities having a population of more than 100,000, there was in general little competition among the defendants, although considerably more than in towns of under 100,000. A summary of the data which substantially represents the true situation, but owing to certain differences in the proofs offered must be regarded as approximate rather than as entirely accurate, is as follows:

Cities of less than 100,000

In cities of less than 100,000, Paramount had complete or partial interests in or pooling agreements* with other defendants affecting 1,236 theatres located in 494 towns. In

*Pooling agreements and joint interests among defendants are treated as indistinguishable for the purpose of summarizing geographical distribution.

POOR COPY
BLEED THROUGH

13 of these towns containing 31 of the theatres—or only 3%—there was competition with another defendant. In 9% of these towns competition between Paramount and the only other defendant in the town was substantially lessened or eliminated by means of a pooling agreement affecting some or all of their theatres; and in this 9% were located 10% of Paramount's theatre interests. And in 88% of the towns, containing 87% of Paramount's theatre interests, Paramount was the only defendant operating theatres. Thus it appears that there was little, if any, competition between Paramount and any other defendant in 97% of the towns of under 100,000 and in respect to 97% of the theatres in which Paramount had an interest.

Fox had similar theatre interests in 428 theatres located in 177 towns. In 13 of these towns containing 29 Fox theatres, or about 7% thereof, there was competition with another defendant. In about 93% of the towns containing the same percentage of Fox's theatre interests, Fox was the only defendant operating theatres.

Warner had similar theatre interests in 306 theatres located in 155 towns of less than 100,000. In 17 towns, or 11%, containing 30 Warner theatres, or 10% of its holdings, there was competition with another major defendant. In 3% of the towns, competition between Warner and the only other defendant in the town was substantially lessened or eliminated by means of pooling agreements; and in this 3% were located 4% of Warner's theatre interests. In 86% of the towns containing the same percentage of Warner's theatre interests, Warner was the only defendant operating theatres. Thus, there appears to have been little, if any, competition between Warner and any other defendant in 89% of the towns and in respect to 90% of the theatres in which Warner had an interest.

Loew had interests in only 17 theatres located in 14 towns. In 4 towns, or 29%, containing 4 Loew theatres, or 23%, there was competition with another defendant. In 14% of the towns, competition was substantially lessened or eliminated by means of pooling agreements; and in this 14% were located 18% of Loew's theatre interests. In 57% of the towns, containing 59% of Loew's theatre interests, Loew was the only defendant operating theatres. Thus, there appears to have been little, if any, competition between Loew and any other defendant in 71% of the towns and in respect to 77% of the theatres in which Loew had an interest. It is to be noted, however, that Loew's theatre interests in towns of less than 100,000 constitute a far smaller proportion of its total theatre holdings than do those of the other defendants.

RKO had interests in 150 theatres located in 66 towns. In 6 towns, or 10%, containing 6 RKO theatres, or 4%, there was competition with another major defendant. In 60% of the towns, competition was substantially lessened or eliminated by means of pooling agreements, and in this 60% were located 73% of RKO's theatre interests. In 30% of the towns, containing 23% of RKO's theatre interests, RKO was the only defendant operating theatres. Thus, there appears to have been little, if any, competition between RKO and any other defendant in 90% of the towns and in respect to 96% of the theatres in which RKO had an interest.

As a further illustration of the absence of substantial competition among the five major defendants in towns of less than 100,000 population, the proofs as to their total theatre holdings make the following showing which seems to us impressive. They had interests altogether in 2,020 theatres located in 834 towns. In 26 towns, or 3%, containing 100 of their theatres, or 5%, there was competition among some of them. In somewhat over 5% of the towns, competition between them was substantially lessened or eliminated by means of pooling agreements, and in this 5% were located 7% of their theatre interests. And in somewhat less than 92% of the towns, containing 88% of their theatre interests, only one of the major defendants owned theatres in the area. Thus, there appears to have been little, if any, competition among the five defendants or any of them in 97% of the towns and in respect to 95% of the theatres in which they had an interest.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

It appears from the foregoing that the effect of the geographical distribution in towns having a population of less than 100,000 was largely to eliminate competition among all of the defendants in the areas where any of them had theatres. The details upon which our results have been based appear in the statistical data set forth at the end of the opinion in Appendix 1.

Cities of 100,000 and over

In cities of over 100,000 Paramount had complete or partial interests in or pooling agreements with other defendants affecting 352 theatres in 49 cities. In 18 of these cities, or 37%, containing 91 Paramount theatres, or 26%, there was competition with other defendants. In an additional 10% of the cities, containing 17% of Paramount's theatre holdings, there were other defendants having theatre interests, but those interests were so relatively small as compared with Paramount, both on first and later runs, that competition with Paramount was unsubstantial owing to the dominance which the latter's theatre holdings gave it. In 12% of these cities competition between Paramount and the only other defendants in the city was substantially lessened or eliminated by means of a pooling agreement affecting some or all of their theatres, and in this 12% were located 18% of Paramount's theatre interests. And in 41% of the cities, containing 39% of Paramount's theatre interests, Paramount was the only defendant operating theatres. Thus, it appears that there was little, if any, competition between Paramount and any other defendant in 63% of the cities of over 100,000 and in respect to 74% of the theatres in which Paramount had an interest.

Fox had similar theatre interests in 211 theatres located in 17 cities. In 5 of these cities, or 29%, containing 54 Fox theatres, or 26%, there was competition with other defendants. In an additional 18% of the cities, containing 41% of Fox's theatre holdings, there were other defendants having theatre interests, but those interests were so relatively small as compared with Fox, both on first and later runs, that competition with Fox was unsubstantial owing to the dominance which the latter's theatre holdings gave it. In 53% of the cities, containing 33% of Fox's theatre interests, Fox was the only defendant operating theatres. Thus, it appears that there was little, if any, competition between Fox and any other defendant in 71% of the cities and in respect to 74% of the theatres in which Fox had an interest.

Warner had similar theatre interests in 243 theatres located in 26 cities. In 14 of those cities, or 54%, containing 89 theatres, or 37%, there was competition with other defendants. In an additional 8% of the cities, containing 5% of Warner's theatre holdings, there were other defendants having theatre interests, but those interests were so relatively small as compared with Warner, both on first and later runs, that competition with Warner was unsubstantial owing to the dominance which the latter's theatre holdings gave it. In 19% of these cities competition between Warner and the only other defendants in the city was substantially lessened or eliminated by means of a pooling agreement affecting some or all of their theatres, and in this 19% were located 51% of Warner's theatre interests. And in 19% of the cities, containing 7% of Warner's theatre interests, Warner was the only defendant operating theatres. Thus, it appears that there was little, if any, competition between Warner and any other defendant in 46% of the cities and in respect to 63% of the theatres in which Warner had an interest.

Loew had similar theatre interests in 144 theatres located in 37 cities. In 32 of those cities, or 86%, containing 122 Loew theatres, or 85%, there was competition with other defendants. In 3% of these cities, competition between Loew and the only other defendant in the city was eliminated by means of a pooling agreement affecting all of their theatres, and in this 3% were located 7% of Loew's theatre interests. And in 11% of the cities, containing 8% of Loew's theatre interests, Loew was the only defendant operating theatres. Thus, it appears that there was little, if any, competition between Loew and any other defendant in 14% of the cities and in respect to 15% of the theatres in which Loew had an interest. In the matter of mere geographical distribution of its theatres, Loew has the most favorable record of any of the major defendants. But it is to be noted that, while it is true that as to its neighborhood prior run theatres in New York, there was competition with RKO in the sense that both operated in New York on the same runs, nevertheless these two companies divided the product of the various defendant distributors under a continuing arrangement so that there was no competition between them in obtaining pictures. Indeed, on one occasion where Paramount was having a long dispute with Loew's as to rental terms for Paramount films to be shown in Loew's New York neighborhood circuit of theatres, no attempt was made by Paramount to lease its films to RKO for exhibition in the latter's circuit, nor was any effort made by RKO to procure Paramount films as they both evidently preferred to adhere to the existing arrangement, under which Loew's circuit consistently exhibited the films of itself, Paramount, United Artists, Columbia and half of Universal, while RKO exhibited the films of itself, Fox, Warner, and half of Universal. Accordingly, we think that the showing that 85% of Loew's theatres are in competition with theatres of other defendants is misleading and may properly be reduced by the exclusion of its New York neighborhood theatres. If this is done, it would give Loew a percentage of approximately 42% of its theatres in competition with other defendants in cities over 100,000.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

RKO had similar theatre interests in 256 theatres in 31 cities. In 22 of these cities, or 72%, containing 190 theatres, or 74%, there was competition with other defendants. In an additional 6% of the cities, containing 4% of RKO's theatre holdings, there were other defendants having theatre interests, but those interests were so relatively small as compared with RKO, both on first and later runs, that competition with RKO was unsubstantial owing to the dominance which the latter's theatre holdings gave it. In 16% of these cities, competition between RKO and the only other defendants in the city was substantially lessened or eliminated by means of a pooling agreement affecting some or all of their theatres, and in this 16% were located 15% of RKO's theatre interests. And in 6% of the cities, containing 7% of RKO's theatre interests, RKO was the only defendant operating theatres. Thus, it appears that there was little, if any, competition between RKO and other defendants in 28% of the cities and in respect to 26% of the theatres in which RKO had an interest. With respect to mere geographical distribution, RKO's record was relatively good but it is to be noted that approximately 58% of its theatre interests were located in New York on neighborhood runs, and the same comments as to distribution of film made in regard to Loew's are applicable to RKO. If its New York neighborhood theatre interests were excluded from the category of theatres in competition with other defendants, the RKO percentage would then be only about 16% in competition with other defendants.

The major defendants had interests altogether in 1,112 theatres located in 87 cities of more than 100,000. In 46% of these cities, containing 23% of their theatre interests, only one of the major defendants owned theatres in the area. In 11.5% of the cities, competition between them was substantially lessened or eliminated by means of pooling agreements, and in this 11.5% were located 16% of their theatre holdings. In an additional 11.5% of the cities, containing 17% of their theatre interests, there was more than one defendant having theatre interests in the city, but the position of one defendant was so dominant relative to the others that competition between them was unsubstantial. In

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

31% of the cities, containing 44% of their theatre interests, there was competition among the defendants. But the New York neighborhood theatres of Loew and RKO, which are included in reaching the 44% figure, should properly be excluded because their is no competition between Loew and RKO in obtaining pictures for the reasons we have already given. This would reduce the percentage of defendants' theatres which compete with one another to 27.

It appears from the foregoing that the effect of the geographical distribution in cities having a population of more than 100,000 was substantially to limit competition among the major defendants. The details upon which our results have been based appear in the statistical data set forth at the end of the opinion in Appendix 2.

The statistics contained in both Appendix 1 and Appendix 2 are derived from data submitted at the original trial and show the situation in 1945. Since the entry of our original decree, these figures have not been substantially changed as to towns of under 100,000, but have been somewhat changed, principally by the dissolution of pools pursuant to our decree, in the case of cities of more than 100,000. The situation in 1945, however, would seem to be far more important in determining whether violations of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act occurred than the status existing after the defendants had been found guilty of wrongs and were merely taking steps to carry out our remedial decree. For this reason, we have included statistics relating to the conduct of Paramount and RKO, even though the remedies against them are now provided under consent decrees.

The plaintiff contends that the figures as to geographical distribution require a finding that there was an agreement to divide territory, but the evidence indicates that much of the acquisition of theatres was due to the buying up of circuits and that the purchases at least in some of these cases involved competition among certain of the defendants. We, therefore, do not find an agreement to divide territory geographically in the organization of the defendants' theatre circuits, but we do hold that the geographical distribution became a part of a system in which competition was largely absent and the status of which was maintained by fixed runs, clearances and prices, by pooling agreements and joint ownerships among the major defendants, and by cross-licensing which made it necessary that they should work together. The argument of some of the defendants that they had no opportunity to change this geographical status not only seems inherently improbable but affirmatively contradicted by the making of pooling agreements and entering into joint ownerships with one another. Moreover, even in the relatively few areas where more than one of the major defendants had theatres, competition for first-run licensing privileges was generally absent because the defendants customarily adhered to a set method in the distribution and playing of their films. In substantiation of the general picture, the plaintiff has shown, on the basis of a study of four seasons between the years 1936 and 1944, that during this period the privilege of first-run exhibition of a defendant's films was ordinarily transferred from one defendant to another only as the result of dissolution of a theatre operating pool or an arbitrary division of the product known as a "split". The lack of competition which we have described has undoubtedly been induced in large measure by the reliance of the defendants on each other in obtaining pictures for use in their various theatres throughout the country. The defendants were also dependent on one another to obtain theatre outlets for their own pictures, for the best customers of any defendant were ordinarily one or more of the other defendants.

We think that there can hardly be adequate competition among the defendants where such interdependence exists. Moreover, when the defendants were interdependent as to a great part of their activities, it necessarily would affect not only competition among themselves, but with independents. We have already found such effects in the various concerted practices of the defendants which have restricted competition with independents. In our former opinion, we provided for a system of competitive bidding for film in the belief that such a system would sufficiently control the reliance of the major defendants of one another's product and theatres. That system having been rejected by the Supreme Court, we must find some other means of preventing the major companies from being in a state of interdependence which too greatly restricts competition.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

One of the chief matters referred to us by the Supreme Court is the effect of vertical integration upon competition in the industry. While vertical integration would not per se violate the Sherman Act, the Supreme Court has made it clear that if such integration is conceived with a specific intent to control the market or creates a power to control the market which is accompanied by an intent to exercise the power, the integration becomes illegal.

We are not satisfied that the plaintiff has shown a calculated scheme to control the market in the conception of the defendants' vertical integration, rather than a purpose to obtain an outlet for their pictures and a supply of film for their theatres. But here we are presented with a conspiracy among the defendants to fix prices, runs and clearances which we have already pointed out was powerfully aided by the system of vertical integration of each of the five major defendants. Such a situation has made the vertical integrations active aids to the conspiracy and has rendered them in this particular case illegal, however innocent they might be in other situations. We do not suggest that every vertically integrated company which engages in restraints of trade or conspiracies will thereby render its vertical integration illegal. The test is whether there is a close relationship between the vertical integration and the illegal practices. Here, the vertical integrations were a definite means of carrying out the restraints and conspiracies we have described. Moreover, we concluded in our prior findings, and the Supreme Court has affirmed our conclusion, that the distribution practices of the defendants constituted an attempt to obtain a monopoly in exhibition forbidden by the Sherman Act, a conclusion which requires the elimination of our Findings 152 and 153, as explained above.

In respect to monopoly power, we think it existed in this case. As we have shown, the defendants were all working together. There was a horizontal conspiracy as to price-fixing, runs and clearances. The vertical integrations aided such a conspiracy at every point. In these circumstances, the defendants must be viewed collectively rather than independently as to the power which they exercised over the market by their theatre holdings. See American Tobacco Co. v. United States, 328 U. S. 781. The statement in our former opinion that the defendants were to be treated individually is subject to our comments in dealing with Findings 152, 153 and 154. We were then proposing to set up a bidding system which was thought adequately to restore competition and, therefore, to render a treatment of the defendants in the aggregate as irrelevant. We regard such treatment as now necessary.

If viewed collectively, the major defendants owned in 1945 at least 70% of the first-run theatres in the 92 largest cities, and the Supreme Court has noted that they owned 60% of the first-run theatres in cities with populations between 25,000 and 100,000. As distributors, they received approximately 73% of the domestic film rental from the films, except Westerns, distributed in the 1943-44 season. These figures certainly indicate, when coupled with the strategic advantages of vertical integration, a power to exclude competition from these markets when desired. This power might be exercised either against non-affiliated exhibitors or distributors, for the ownership of what was generally the best first-run theatres, coupled with the possession by the defendants of the best pictures, enabled them substantially to control the market. If an intent to exercise the power be thought important, it existed in this case, as we noted above in finding an attempt to monopolize. Our former Finding No. 119 was not made in consideration of first-run theatres but was based on total theatre holdings in the country, of which the theatres owned by the defendants represented but a small fraction. We, therefore, did not take into consideration the monopoly power in respect to first-run theatres, which we have since been directed to consider. Accordingly, our Finding No. 119 is in view of our further consideration misleading and must be vacated.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

We may add that what we have said about the power to exclude independents from first-runs in the 92 cities is supported by evidence of actual exclusion which is presented in the Government's original brief, pages 13-14 and 35-40. In many cities, there was complete exclusion of independents and in numerous others a restricted distribution of pictures to independents, at times by only one of the defendants, and at other times by most limited percentages of pictures as compared with the number distributed to affiliated theatres. The facts as to film distribution in the 1943-44 season show that the five major defendants achieved a monopoly of first-run exhibition of the feature films distributed by the five major defendants in about 43 of the 92 cities of over 100,000 and of the feature films distributed by the eight defendants in about 143 of the 320 cities of 25,000 to 100,000. [See Government Exhibits 489, 490, 490(a)]. In addition to the proof of monopoly control in cities of more than 25,000, the plaintiff has produced proof that in approximately 238 towns involving in all but about 17 cases populations of less than 25,000 but having two or more theatres, some single one of the five major defendants, or in about 18 cases two of the defendants, had all the theatres and therefore possessed a complete local monopoly in exhibition. [See Government Exhibit 488]. These figures are subject to some qualifications because of inaccuracy as to a few localities, but for the most part they appear to be correct and to show either total absence of competition or slight competition from drive-ins and theatres in nearby communities. They afford significant additional proof of monopoly control. Accordingly, there was not only the power to exclude which might be exercised at will but an actual exclusion approximating in the aggregate 70% of the first-run theatre market in the 92 largest cities. This percentage is based on the proportions of theatre ownership of the major defendants in these cities as compared with independents. There is certainly no reason to suppose that at least as great a percentage would not exist in favor of the major defendants in the number of feature films distributed on first-run.

Furthermore, the power to fix clearances and runs which we have found existed and was exercised by the major defendants was in itself a power to exclude independents who were competitors, and was accompanied by actual exclusion.

THE REMEDY

The Supreme Court has denied the remedy of requiring the defendants to offer films to the highest bidder and has required us to find some other means of obviating the illegal practices and attempted monopoly on the part of the defendants. The latter argue that the injunction issued in our prior decree, supplemented by a prohibition of discrimination against small independents and an adequate arbitration system, would afford a sufficient remedy. Mr. Justice Douglas has in this very case pointed out the inadequacies of an injunction to deal with situations much like the present. In discussing the objections to competitive bidding, he alluded to the fact that the determination of what was the best bid in a given case would depend on a comparison of the theatres and theatre operators desiring a picture, rentals offered, which might be a flat rental for one theatre and a percentage rental for another, and the relative value in respect to the various offers of the clearances and runs proposed. He said: "It would involve the judiciary in the administration of intricate and detailed rules governing priority, period of clearances, length of run, competitive areas, reasonable return, and the like." [United States v. Paramount Pictures, Inc., 334 U. S. 131, 163.] Practically all of the same objections would exist if an injunction should be relied on as the only remedy for the abuses which have been found to exist in the case at bar. The effect of such a solution would be to leave the determination of difficult comparisons to the discretion of the very parties who have frequently abused that discretion in the past, or to a detailed supervision by the courts, the burden of which would only be ameliorated by a system of arbitration if and in so far as particular independents having grievances might be willing to adopt it. If we had regarded an injunction as a sufficient remedy, we would not have required a competitive bidding for films in our original opinion.

POOR COPY

In United States v. Crescent Amusement Co., 323 U. S. 173, 189-190, Mr. Justice Douglas, in discussing the inadequacy of injunctions and the propriety of divestiture to prevent violations of the Sherman Act, said:

> "The fact that the companies were affiliated induced joint action and agreement. Common control was one of the instruments in bringing about unity of purpose and unity of action and in making the conspiracy effective. If that affiliation continues, there will be tempting opportunity for these exhibitors to continue to act in combination against the independents. The proclivity in the past to use that affiliation for an unlawful end warrants effective assurance that no such opportunity will be available in the future. Hence we do not think the District Court abused its discretion in failing to limit the relief to an injunction against future violations. There is no reason why the protection of the public interest should depend solely on that somewhat cumbersome procedure when another effective one is available."

In the Crescent case, the court accordingly affirmed an order of divestiture of stock held by the defendant companies to terminate affiliations and prevent further violations of the Act.

As an injunction is regarded as an insufficient remedy there must, in our opinion, be a divorcement or separation of the business of the defendants as exhibitors of films from their business as producers and distributors. Just as in the Crescent case affiliation was held to furnish the incentive for carrying out the conspiracy that there existed, we find that vertical integration has served a similar purpose in the case at bar.

It is argued that the monopoly power which we have found existed in 1945 as to first-run theatres in the 92 largest cities has ceased to exist and that monopolies in particular localities have been substantially lessened in respect to Loew, Warner, and Fox, by the consent decrees recently entered against Paramount and RKO, by the dissolution of pools and joint interests which has taken place or will take place pursuant to our decree and by changes in distribution practices. Assuming that this is so, nevertheless, we have found that a conspiracy has been maintained through price-fixing, runs and clearances, induced by vertical integration, and that this conspiracy resulted in the exercise of monopoly power. The necessity of terminating such a conspiracy by the three defendants which have not subjected themselves to a consent decree would be unaffected by the present existence or non-existence of a monopoly on their part in first-runs, for the conspiracy is illegal even though the participants may have ceased at least for the time to possess monopoly power. Moreover, the monopoly power might be built up again if the illegal practices were not terminated by divorcement, irrespective of the fact that two of the conspirators have been eliminated from the conspiracy by the consent decrees. Therefore, the divorcement we have determined to order appears to be the only adequate means of terminating the conspiracy and preventing any resurgence of monopoly power on the part of the remaining defendants. Beyond all the above considerations there would seem to be an inherent injustice in allowing defendants to avoid divorcement when they would have been originally subjected to it merely because two of their confederates eliminated themselves from a compulsory decree which would have been based upon the participation of all in the conspiracy.

POOR COPY

The defendants further contend that they have changed their distribution practices by arranging for many runs and clearances which are more equitable than before, and that they no longer have any participation in fixing the prices to be charged by a theatre licensee, which are now wholly controlled by the licensees. But the temptation to continue such practices will still be strong, and we cannot regard an injunction as a sufficient preventive for the reasons already stated. Likewise, we cannot know whether the new distribution practices comply with the injunctive provisions of our former decree and do not feel justified in leaving defendants found to be participants heretofore in improper practices free to continue them except for the inadequate injunctive provisions.

We have already held that our Findings 119, 152, 153 and 154 should be vacated. We also hold that Findings 155 and 156 should be vacated as they are incorrect or misleading in view of the elimination as a remedy of competitive bidding and our decision that injunctive relief alone is an insufficient remedy.

The plaintiff asks to have Finding 100 vacated and suggests a substitute. We hold that Finding 100 should be vacated because it is somewhat obscure in its scope and implications, but we do not find sufficient reason for adopting the proposed substitute, which seems to us to be irrelevant to the issues involved.

Since the Supreme Court has eliminated any system of competitive bidding, our Findings 85 and 111 should likewise be vacated.

JOINT INTERESTS

The Supreme Court has asked us to reconsider the dissolution of joint interests between defendants and independents because some partial interests of independents were said to have been held by investors rather than actual or potential exhibitors. Paramount and RKO need not be considered, since they are now subject to the provisions of consent decrees. Fox has obtained an order, agreed to by the plaintiff, dealing with the disposition of all its joint interests, except its partial ownership through its affiliate National Theatres Corporation in Evergreen State Amusement Corporation. Fox contends that evidence offered at the trial after remand shows that one Newman, who had an indirect interest of about 15% in Evergreen, was not an actual or potential theatre operator. He became the president and manager of Evergreen, but that in itself did not make him a co-owner with Fox in that company, and his interest of about 15% seems to us no more than the interest of an investor. Nor do we find any indication that he would have been an independent operator of a theatre but for his investment in Evergreen. Prior to the investment he had been an employee of National and for some seven years had had no ownership in a theatre. In the circumstances, we hold that the interest of Fox in Evergreen need not be dissolved, although it will be subject to a general divorcement like the other theatre holdings of Fox from its distribution business.

In respect to Warner, the plaintiff has consented to an order disposing of all its joint interests. In the case of Loew, the plaintiff has agreed to an order disposing of its joint interest in Buffalo Theatres, Inc., and seems to have approved a stipulation made in open court providing for the disposition of all its other joint interests.

In our opinion the orders and stipulations relating to joint ownerships of Fox, Warner and Loew with independents are sufficient to dispose of all questions arising under the requirement of the Supreme Court that joint interests with actual or potential operators be dissolved. In view of the situation presented by the making of these orders and stipulations, our Findings 115, 116 and 117 should be vacated, and the proposed substituted findings of the plaintiff should be denied.

POOR COPY

FRANCHISES

We are directed by the Supreme Court to reconsider our prior decision prohibiting franchises in all cases, and as an initial step conforming to the Supreme Court's opinion our Finding 89 should be vacated. On reconsideration, we adhere to the view that the three remaining major defendants as well as the three minor defendants should not be allowed to grant franchises except to independents. Such a practice ties up the distribution of films and restricts competition by independents to obtain pictures for what we regard as unnecessarily long periods and has been a method of unlawful discrimination in the past. We hold, however, that any of the defendants may grant franchises to an independent operator, provided that the result thereof will be to enable such independent to compete effectively with theatres affiliated with a defendant or with theatres in the new theatre circuits to be formed pursuant to our order of divorcement. We see no objection to the substituted Finding 89 proposed by the plaintiff and adopt it accordingly.

CLEARANCE

Our disposition of clearances was in no way altered by the Supreme Court. We think, however, that our Finding 77 was inadvertent and should be modified so as to read as follows, thus conforming to paragraph 4 in Section II of our decree based upon the finding:

> "A grant of clearance, when not accompanied by a fixing of minimum admission prices or not unduly extended as to area or duration affords a fair protection of the interest of the licensee in the run granted without unreasonably interfering with the interest of the public."

The substitute for Finding 78 proposed by the plaintiff is denied.

DISCRIMINATION

The plaintiff requests cancellation of paragraphs 8 and 9 in Section II of our former decree, which include provisions as to discrimination, and wishes to substitute a flat prohibition against including in licenses made with affiliated exhibitors or circuits of theatres certain contract provisions by which discriminations against small independents and in favor of the large affiliated and unaffiliated circuits were accomplished, as this court stated in Finding 110, affirmed by the Supreme Court. These provisions would only be illegal if inherently discriminatory or used in a discriminatory manner. We think it sufficient to provide, as was done in the Paramount consent decree, that the distributor defendants be enjoined "from licensing any feature for exhibition upon any run in any theatre in any other manner than that each license shall be offered and taken theatre by theatre, solely upon the merits and without discrimination in favor of affiliated theatres, circuit theatres, or others." It may be objected that this is competitive bidding which has been rejected by the Supreme Court, but it neither involves calling for bids nor licensing picture by picture. A group of pictures may be licensed to one who wishes to take them without conditions being imposed that he can obtain one only if he purchases the group. We hold that the request of the plaintiff for the cancellation of paragraph 8 of Section II of the decree should be granted, but paragraph 9 should stand as it is. A new paragraph corresponding with the one we have quoted above from the Paramount consent decree should be substituted for the cancelled paragraph 8.

THE THREE MINOR DEFENDANTS

We can see nothing in the arguments on behalf of these defendants for special treatment except an attempt to revise some of our former findings of fact and conclusions of law which have been affirmed by the Supreme Court. We have already dealt with the questions of franchises and discrimination earlier in this opinion. In respect to road shows, we see no reason for exempting them from the various injunctive provisions of our decree. It is entirely possible for the licensor to license for road shows, so long as it is not done in a discriminatory manner, either at a flat rental or on the basis of some percentage of what the show is thought likely to yield. But it would be unlawful in this, as in the case of other licenses, for the licensor to require a fixed admission price as a condition of the license.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

The three minor defendants argue that they should be allowed to retain their old customers irrespective of discrimination and contend that the Supreme Court has indicated that they possess this right. We cannot so interpret the opinion of the Supreme Court. It only presented the argument that, if competitive bidding had been sanctioned, the three minor defendants would lose the relationships they had with old customers and would be at a disadvantage in competing with the more powerful major defendants whose own theatres were not subject to competitive bidding. The system of preferring old customers undoubtedly aided discrimination in the past and served as a ready excuse for a fixed system of runs and clearances and was to that extent unlawful. When separation of the business of distribution from that of the operation of theatres is effected, there will be a favorable market for the three minor defendants in which to license their pictures. This will be not only a compensation for inability to prefer their old customers but apparently a substantial added advantage to them in obtaining a greater opportunity to license their pictures than they had heretofore.

THE DECREE

The Supreme Court has asked us to divest any theatres which may be fruits of past illegal restraints or conspiracies. It may appear also to be necessary, irrespective of our general plan of divorcement, to terminate theatre monopolies in certain local situations possessed by any individual defendant or by any new theatre circuit which may be set up under the divorcement decree we propose. The plaintiff has presented insufficient evidence to justify us in disestablishing particular theatres either on the theory of local monopolies or of illegal fruits, and indeed it has formally stated that evidence of illegal fruits is not now available. So far as local monopolies are concerned, the statistics presented by the plaintiff were furnished to support the need for a general divorcement which this opinion has sanctioned and did not precisely reach any situations of local monopoly which may require divestiture of specific theatres. Moreover, certain of the statistics presented by the plaintiff go no farther than the year 1945, and there have been various changes in theatre holdings since that date. Accordingly, consideration of fruits and local monopolies will be suspended in the decree which we shall presently make.

In accordance with the instructions of the Supreme Court it is necessary that the provisions of paragraph 6 in Section III of our former decree in respect to expansion of theatre holdings be vacated. A provision should be substituted in the decree to be entered which enjoins the three exhibitor-defendants and any theatre-holding corporation resulting from the divorcement we propose from acquiring a beneficial interest in any additional theatre unless the acquiring exhibitor-defendant or corporation shall show to the satisfaction of the court, and the court shall first find, that such acquisition will not unduly restrain competition in the exhibition of feature motion pictures.

It is argued by the plaintiff that a limited prohibition of cross-licensing of pictures among the three major defendants should be adopted temporarily. We think such a limitation would be unwarrantedly injurious both to those defendants and to the public. The plaintiff proposes that each major defendant be enjoined from licensing more than half of its films to any of the other defendants pending the completion of divorcement plans in those towns where the plaintiff claims there are no independent theatres or at least no independent first-run theatres. The plaintiff evidently hopes that such a limitation would induce independents to acquire theatres in so-called closed towns. Unless and until that should happen, one or two of the major defendants might be unable to show more than half of their pictures in such towns, and if but one of the major defendants had theatres there, those theatres could show only half of the films of the other two. It is manifest that this limitation upon cross-licensing would injure both the major defendants and the public, who would be deprived of seeing some of the pictures. In addition to this, the selection of the particular pictures in the half which could be licensed would involve some difficulties and might prove in the end to have been unwise, both for the distributor involved and the public interest. Our remedy of divorcement will meet all of the purposes for which the plaintiff is striving. We do not think that its completion will be so delayed as to justify this doubtful and difficult ad interim remedy proposed by the plaintiff.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

The arbitration system and the Appeal Board which has been a part of it have been useful in the past and as we understand it have met with the general approval of the plaintiff and of those defendants who have agreed to it. In our opinion it has saved much litigation in the courts and it should be continued. Accordingly, the three major distributor-defendants and any others who are willing to file with the American Arbitration Association their consent to abide by the rules of arbitration and to perform the awards of arbitrators, should be authorized to set up an arbitration system with an accompanying Appeal Board, which will become effective as soon as it may be organized after the decree to be entered in this action shall be made, upon terms to be settled by the court upon notice to the parties to this action.

The decree herein should be settled on notice and should be in accord with what we have said in the foregoing opinion. The terms as to divorcement set forth in the plaintiff's proposed decree seem to us satisfactory, except that the reference to paragraph 10 in Section III relating to joint interests, which we have rejected, should be deleted. We also approve of the further proposal of the plaintiff that the plaintiff and the defendant shall submit plans calling for such divestiture of theatres as may comply with the requirements of the Supreme Court regarding local monopolies and illegal fruits. Any ultimate disposition, however, must await a later order which shall be dependent upon the proof the plaintiff may furnish as to local monopolies and illegal fruits. We may perhaps indulge in the hope that the parties may be able to agree as to the disposition of any such interests, as they have done in the case of joint ownerships.

We do not approve of the provisions limiting cross-licensing pending the completion of divorcement or the provisions relating to dissolution of joint interests with independents, which have been sufficiently provided for in stipulations of the three major defendants and the orders entered thereon to which we have made reference. Our opinion indicates other changes in the decree proposed by the plaintiff, which should be embodied in the amended decree.

We have specified former findings which should be vacated and in some instances have set forth proper substitutes. Further disposition of any findings to be made should await submission by the parties.

Submit proposed amended decree and findings on or before September 20, 1949.

Dated July 25, 1949.

AUGUSTUS N. HAND
U. S. C. J.

HENRY W. GODDARD
U. S. D. J.

ALFRED C. COXE
U. S. D. J.

APPENDIX 1

Summary of Theatre Holdings—Major Defendants

Towns Under 100,000—1945

	Paramount		Fox		Warner		Loew		RKO		Total
	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres
One deft. owns all affiliated theatres in the town	438 88%	1084 87%	163 92%	398 93%	133 86%	263 86%	8 57%	10 59%	21 30%	34 23%	763 91.5%	1789 88%
The defts. in the town are pooled as to some or all of their theatres	43 9%	6 115* 10%	1 .5%	1* —	5 3%	5 8* 4%	2 14%	1 2* 18%	39 60%	2 108* 73%	45 5.5%	14 117* 7%
There is competition between defts.	13 3%	31 3%	13 7.5%	29 7%	17 11%	30 10%	4 29%	4 23%	6 10%	6 4%	26 3%	100 5%
Totals	494 100%	1121 115* 100%	177 100%	427 1* 100%	155 100%	298 8* 100%	14 100%	15 2* 100%	66 100%	42 108* 100%	834 100%	1903 117* 100%

*These theatres were pooled by two defendants. Since each time a theatre was pooled there were two owners involved, the total number of pooled theatre interests was twice the number of theatres pooled. The term "pooled" is here used to include joint ownerships among defendants.

The total number of towns is not necessarily the sum of the towns listed for each of the five defendants, since some towns have theatres owned by more than one individual defendant and such towns are therefore duplicated in the individual listings.

BLEED THROUGH

POOR COPY

APPENDIX 2

Summary of Theatre Holdings—Major Defendants
Towns Over 100,000—1945

	Paramount		Fox		Warner		Loew		RKO		Totals
	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres	Towns	Theatres
One deft. owns all affiliated theatres in town	20 41%	138 39%	9 53%	70 33%	5 19%	17 7%	4 11%	12 8%	2 6%	19 7%	40 46%	256 23%
The defts. in the town are pooled as to some or all of their theatres	6 12%	15 50* 18%	— —	— —	5 19%	98 27* 51%	1 3%	10* 7%	5 16%	2 35* 15%	10 11.5%	115 61* 16%
Holdings of a deft. or pool which dominates affiliates in the town	5 10%	53 5* 17%	3 18%	81 6* 41%	2 8%	8 4* 5%	— —	— —	2 6%	1) 9*) 4%)	10	165 22*
Holdings in town dominated by another deft.	4	3 9*	2	2 1*	1	4	9	8 9*	5	5) 1*)	11.5%	17%
Holdings where competition exists	14 37%	71 8* 26%	3 29%	50 1* 26%	13 54%	80 5* 37%	23 86%	104 1* 85%	17 72%	177 7* 74%	27 31%	482 11* 44%
Totals	49 100%	280 72* 100%	17 100%	203 8* 100%	26 100%	207 36* 100%	37 100%	124 20* 100%	31 100%	204 52* 100%	87 100%	1018 94* 100%

*These theatres were pooled by two defendants. Since each time a theatre was pooled there were two owners involved, the total number of pooled theatre interests was twice the number of theatres pooled. The term "pooled" is here used to include joint ownerships among defendants.

In arriving at an over-all total of theatres located in towns where one defendant dominated affiliated competition, the theatres of all defendants in such towns have been included because there exists no substantial competition among the defendants in any of them, but in considering records of individual defendants holdings in towns dominated by another defendant were treated as competitive. The ten towns designated as areas where one defendant or a pool dominates all other affiliates are:
Atlanta, Cleveland, Denver, Detroit, Des Moines, Houston, Los Angeles, Paterson, Rochester and San Francisco.

The total number of towns is not necessarily the sum of the towns listed for each of the five defendants, since some towns have theatres owned by more than one individual defendant and such towns are therefore duplicated in the individual listings.

United States District Court

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff, against LOEW'S INCORPORATED, WARNER BROS. PICTURES, INC., WARNER BROS. PICTURES DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION (formerly known as VITAGRAPH, INC.), WARNER BROS. CIRCUIT MANAGEMENT CORPORATION, TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX FILM CORPORATION, NATIONAL THEATRES CORPORATION, COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPORATION, SCREEN GEMS, INC., COLUMBIA PICTURES OF LOUISIANA, INC., UNIVERSAL CORPORATION, UNIVERSAL PICTURES COMPANY, INC., UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGES, INC., BIG U FILM EXCHANGE, INC., and UNITED ARTISTS CORPORATION, Defendants.	Equity No. 87-273

FINAL DECREE

The plaintiff, having filed its petition herein on July 29, 1938, and its amended and supplemental complaint on November 14, 1940; the defendants having filed their answers to such complaint, denying the substantive allegations thereof; the court after trial having entered a decree herein, dated December 31, 1946, as modified by order entered February 11, 1947; the plaintiff and the defendants having appealed from such decree; the Supreme Court of the United States having in part affirmed and in part reversed such decree, and having remanded this case to this court for further proceedings in conformity with its opinion dated May 3, 1948; this court having, on June 25, 1948, by order made the mandate and decree of the Supreme Court the order and judgment of this court; a consent decree having been entered on November 8, 1948, against the defendants Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., RKO Proctor Corporation, RKO Midwest Corporation, and Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation; orders having been entered on stipulation against the Fox, Loew, and Warner defendants respectively, and Loew having further stipulated in the record, with respect to certain theatre interests held jointly with others; and a consent judgment having been entered on March 3, 1949 against defendants Paramount Pictures, Inc. and Paramount Film Distributing Corporation; and an order having been entered on April 21, 1949, severing and terminating, as of March 3, 1949, this action as against defendants Paramount Pictures, Inc. and Paramount Film Distributing Corporation; and an order having been entered on January 18, 1950 severing and terminating as of November 8, 1948 the action as against defendants Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., RKO Proctor Corporation, RKO Midwest Corporation and Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation;

COPY BOUND VERTICALLY

Now, having considered the proposals of the parties, having duly received additional evidence and heard further arguments after entry of the consent decree against the RKO defendants, and having rendered its opinion on July 25, 1949, and having filed its findings of fact and conclusions of law in accordance with said opinion:

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that the decree heretofore entered by this court on December 31, 1946 is hereby amended to read as follows:

I

1. The findings of fact and conclusions of law heretofore made are superseded by the findings and conclusions now entered in support of this decree.

POOR COPY

2. The complaint is dismissed as to all claims made against the defendants herein based upon their acts as producers, whether as individuals or in conjunction with others.

II

Each of the defendant distributors, Loew's, Incorporated; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Warner Bros. Pictures Distributing Corporation (formerly known as Vitagraph, Inc.); Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, and the successors of each of them (including but not limited to companies resulting from divorcement), and any and all individuals who act in behalf of any thereof with respect to the matters enjoined, and each corporation in which said defendants or any of them own a direct or indirect stock interest of more than fifty per cent, is hereby enjoined:

1. From granting any license in which minimum prices for admission to a theatre are fixed by the parties, either in writing or through a committee, or through arbitration, or upon the happening of any event or in any manner or by any means.

2. From agreeing with each other or with any exhibitors or distributors to maintain a system of clearances; the term "clearances" as used herein meaning the period of time stipulated in license contracts which must elapse between runs of the same feature within a particular area or in specified theatres.

3. From granting any clearance between theatres not in substantial competition.

4. From granting or enforcing any clearance against theatres in substantial competition with the theatre receiving the license for exhibition in excess of what is reasonably necessary to protect the licensee in the run granted. Whenever any clearance provision is attacked as not legal under the provisions of this decree, the burden shall be upon the distributor to sustain the legality thereof.

5. From further performing any existing franchise to which it is a party and from making any franchises in the future, except for the purpose of enabling an independent exhibitor to operate a theatre in competition with a theatre affiliated with a defendant or with theatres in new circuits which may be formed as a result of divorcement. The term "franchise" as used herein means a licensing agreement or series of licensing agreements, entered into as a part of the same transaction, in effect for more than one motion picture season and covering the exhibition of pictures released by one distributor during the entire period of agreement.

6. From making or further performing any formula deal or master agreement to which it is a party. The term "formula deal" as used herein means a licensing agreement with a circuit of theatres in which the license fee of a given feature is measured for the theatres covered by the agreement by a specified percentage of the feature's national gross. The term "master agreement" means a licensing agreement, also known as a "blanket deal", covering the exhibition of features in a number of theatres usually comprising a circuit.

7. From performing or entering into any license in which the right to exhibit one feature is conditioned upon the licensee's taking one or more other features. To the extent that any of the features have not been trade shown prior to the granting of the license for more than a single feature, the licensee shall be given by the licensor the right to reject twenty per cent of such features not trade shown prior to the granting of the license, such right of rejection to be exercised in the order of release within ten days after there has been an opportunity afforded to the licensee to inspect the feature.

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

8. From licensing any feature for exhibition upon any run in any theatre in any other manner than that each license shall be offered and taken theatre by theatre, solely upon the merits and without discrimination in favor of affiliated theatres, circuit theatres or others.

III

Each of the defendant exhibitors, Loew's, Incorporated; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corporation; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; and National Theatres Corporation; and the successors of each of them (including but not limited to companies resulting from divorcement), and any and all individuals who act in behalf of any thereof with respect to the matters enjoined, and each corporation in which said defendants or any of them own a direct or indirect stock interest of more than fifty per cent, is hereby enjoined and restrained:

1. From performing or enforcing agreements, if any, referred to in Paragraphs 5 and 6 of the foregoing Section II hereof to which it may be a party.

2. From making or continuing to perform pooling agreements whereby given theatres of two or more exhibitors normally in competition are operated as a unit or whereby the business policies of such exhibitors are collectively determined by a joint committee or by one of the exhibitors or whereby profits of the "pooled" theatres are divided among the owners according to prearranged percentages.

3. From making or continuing to perform agreements that the parties may not acquire other theatres in a competitive area where a pool operates without first offering them for inclusion in the pool.

4. From making or continuing leases of theatres under which it leases any of its theatres to another defendant or to an independent operating a theatre in the same competitive area in return for a share in the profits.

5. From continuing to own or acquiring any beneficial interests in any theatre, whether in fee or in shares of stock or otherwise, in conjunction with another defendant, or with any company resulting from divorcements provided for in decrees entered in this cause.

6. From acquiring a beneficial interest in any additional theatre unless the acquiring company shall show to the satisfaction of the court, and the court shall first find that such acquisition will not unduly restrain competition in the exhibition of feature motion pictures, provided, however, that the acquisition of a theatre as a replacement for a theatre, held or acquired in conformity with this decree, which may be lost through physical destruction, conversion to non-theatrical purposes, disposition (other than the disposition of a theatre in compliance with this decree) or expiration or cancellation of the lease under which such theatre is held, shall not be deemed to be the acquisition of an additional theatre.

7. From operating, booking, or buying features for any of its theatres through any agent who is known by it to be also acting in such manner for any other exhibitor, independent or affiliate.

IV

1. Within six months from the entry of this decree each of the major defendants named in Sections II and III of this decree shall submit a plan for the ultimate separation of its distribution and production business from its exhibition business. Upon the filing of such a plan, the Government shall have three months within which to file objections thereto and propose amended or alternative plans for accomplishing the same result. Such further proceedings with respect to such plans as the court may then order shall then be had. Such plans shall, in any event, provide for the completion of such separation within three years from the date of the entry of this decree.

2. Within one year from the entry of this decree the Government and each of the defendant exhibitors named in Section III of this decree shall submit respectively such plans for divestiture of theatre interests, other than those heretofore ordered to be divested, which they believe to be adequate to satisfy the requirements of the Supreme Court decision herein with respect to such divestiture. Upon the filing of such a plan the Government and the affected defendant shall have six months within which to file objections thereto and propose amended or alternative plans for accomplishing the same result. Such further proceedings with respect to such plans may then be had as the court may then order.

3. No defendant distributor named in Section II of this decree, and no distributor company resulting from the divorcement ordered herein, shall engage in the exhibition business; and no defendant exhibitor named in Section III of this decree, and no exhibitor company resulting from the divorcement ordered herein, shall engage in the distribution business, except that permission to a distributor company resulting from divorcement to engage in the exhibition business or to an exhibitor company resulting from divorcement to engage in the distribution business may be granted by the court upon notice to the United States and upon a showing that any such engagement shall not unreasonably restrain competition in the distribution or exhibition of motion pictures.

4. No exhibitor company resulting from the divorcement ordered herein shall acquire directly or indirectly any interest in any theatre divested by any other defendant pursuant to any plan ordered upon Paragraph 2 of Section IV hereof or pursuant to Paragraph C 1 of Section III of the Consent Judgment as to the Paramount defendants entered March 3, 1949.

V

Nothing contained in this decree shall be construed to limit, in any way whatsoever, the right of each major defendant bound by this decree, during the three years allowed for the completion of the plan of reorganization provided for in Section IV, to license, or in any way to provide for, the exhibition of any or all the motion pictures which it may at any time distribute, in such manner, and upon such terms, and subject to such conditions as may be satisfactory to it, in any theatre in which such defendant has a proprietary interest, either directly or through subsidiaries.

VI

The defendant distributors named in Section II of this decree and any others who are willing to file with the American Arbitration Association their consent to abide by the rules of arbitration and to perform the awards of arbitrators, are hereby authorized to set up an arbitration system with an accompanying Appeal Board which will become effective as soon as it may be organized, upon terms to be settled by the court upon notice to the parties to this action.

VII

The provisions of the existing consent decree are hereby declared to be of no further force or effect, except in so far as may be necessary to conclude arbitration proceedings now pending and to liquidate in an orderly manner the financial obligations of the defendants and the American Arbitration

POOR COPY

BLEED THROUGH

Association, incurred in the establishment of the consent decree arbitration systems. Existing awards and those made pursuant to pending proceedings shall continue to be enforceable.

VIII

1. For the purpose of securing compliance with this decree, and for no other purpose, duly authorized representatives of the Department of Justice shall, on written request of the Attorney General or an Assistant Attorney General, and on notice to any defendant bound by this decree, reasonable as to time and subject matter, made to such defendant at its principal office, and subject to any legally recognized privilege (a) be permitted reasonable access, during the office hours of such defendant, to all books, ledgers, accounts, correspondence, memoranda and other records and documents in the possession or under the control of such defendant, relating to any of the matters contained in this decree, and that during the times that the plaintiff shall desire such access, counsel for such defendant may be present, and (b) subject to the reasonable convenience of such defendant, and without restraint or interference from it, be permitted to interview its officers or employees regarding any such matters, at which interviews counsel for the officer or employee interviewed and counsel for such defendant may be present. For the purpose of securing compliance with this decree any defendant upon the written request of the Attorney General, or an Assistant Attorney General, shall submit such reports with respect to any of the matters contained in this decree as from time to time may be necessary for the purpose of enforcement of this decree.

2. Information obtained pursuant to the provisions of this Section shall not be divulged by any representative of the Department of Justice to any person other than a duly authorized representative of the Department of Justice, except in the course of legal proceedings to which the United States is a party, or as otherwise required by law.

IX

Jurisdiction of this cause is retained for the purpose of enabling any of the parties to this decree, and no others, to apply to the court at any time for such orders or direction as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction, modification, or carrying out of the same, for the enforcement of compliance therewith, and for the punishment of violations thereof, or for other or further relief.

Dated: February 8, 1950.

AUGUSTUS N. HAND
United States Circuit Judge

HENRY W. GODDARD
United States District Judge

ALFRED C. COXE
United States District Judge